Case IH's low to mid horsepower tractors continue to give Australian farmers the capability and confidence they need to keep their operations moving. According to Seamus McCarthy, Case IH Tractor Product Manager, this part of the range is purpose built for the range of everyday tasks that keep farms productive.

"Our low to mid horsepower range is built around capability, simplicity and durability to handle everyday farm tasks. These are the things that our farmers rely on when they're handling loader work, hay, fencing, slashing or general maintenance."

Within the lineup, the Farmall® series remains a trusted option for those wanting a hardworking, no nonsense tractor. The Farmall M delivers smooth, responsive performance that brings extra control and ease to loader and hay operations. Seamus said the Farmall JXM stands out for its strong value and broad versatility, offering dependable performance with a straightforward, easy to operate layout.

"The JXM is built to take on a wide mix of jobs across different operations, and it does it with maximum efficiency and minimal fuss," he said.

For farmers wanting more refinement, power and operator comfort, the Maxxum®, Puma® and Optum® series offer a step up in advanced technology and enhanced drivability. Case IH has focused on intuitive controls, operator friendly innovations and transmission options designed for smoother shifting, fuel efficiency and precise operation.

"These tractors are built to be true multitools," Seamus said. "The technology in the Maxxum range helps you work smarter – whether you're handling hay, running a loader or pulling heavier implements. It makes the job quicker and easier, and that's where the real value lies."
